

TWIFTS

educates

Everything you should know about a blowjob

When a lady wants to go down on a man, he knows she's into him and she wants to make him feel good. When a man wants to get a blowjob, well, he just wants somebody (or something, people can have weird fetishes) to suck his dick. When these two desires meet, there cums an evening of pleasure. Or disappointment. Depends on how it goes.

If you want everything to go smoothly and come to an end the way you want to, here are a few tips for ladies and gentlemen to master the art of giving and receiving a good old blowjob.

What you SHOULD do

For Her

Ladies, if you are here, you probably doubt your skill of wrapping your mouth around his dick. But there is no one-trick-fit-all method. There are just basic principles to rely on. And I have gathered for a few a bunch of simple tips and advice how to seduce him and make him beg for more. Or at least make his stay till the morning.

1. Be confident

Messing up your blowjob is practically the last thing you could do with it. The only bad thing you can do is underestimate your own abilities. If you've got a mouth and your partner's got a dick, you have all the tools you need to give a perfect blow job. So be confident in yourself and don't make the mistake of underestimating your abilities. Like, you could be nervous and all, maybe it's even your first time giving a head, but c'mon. He'll be grateful that you're doing it in the first place!

2. Get comfortable

Blowjob can take a while. Especially if the guy is tough and not one the come-as-long-as-a-girl-touch-his-penis type. So set yourself in a position in which you can spend at least ten minutes without cramps. It will benefit you too — the more comfortable you are, the more you are relaxed and the more you enjoy the whole process. Oh, and the hair. Do something with it so you don't have to get out of your mouth every other move. Use a hairband or ask him to hold. He'll be excited.

3. Include some foreplay

Foreplay can mean the difference between a standard oral sex experience and the best. time. ever. To up the excitement, start by licking, blowing, stroking, and kissing everything but his penis. Look him in the eyes and tease and play. Don't believe when you hear guys don't like foreplay. Many LOVE foreplay. It's like eating a dessert before dessert.

4. Use your mouth

Blowjob is more than his penis getting in and getting out. You have so much moving, twitching, wet and warm parts in your mouth that it's just illegal not to use them. There's far more to giving head than sucking, and seeing as his genitals are in your mouth, you are the one who is completely dictating the terms. Enthusiastic head-bobbing one minute, followed by slithering your tongue down his shaft, followed by smoochy kisses around the head... it's all good.

5. Use your hands

Blowjob is more than shoving his dick in your mouth. Yeah, I know I said "use your mouth". But nowhere it says "use only your mouth", dah. Your hands are the basis of a great blow job. Use oil, lots of it actually, for foreplay purposes. Learn to give hand jobs by taking your time to practice on him. Stroke, and grab, and tease, and squeeze (a little) — options are almost endless.

6. Go for the balls

There's more of a man than a penis. There are also things hanging right below the penis and they are very sensitive. Gently rub them or cup them in your hand and feel the weight of them. Go there with your tongue and fingers, try different things and see what makes him tremble. Once you found it, he's all yours.

7. Go for his asshole

It's sad enough that the balls get so overlooked, but what really brings a tear to my eye is all of those poor neglected buttholes out there. Gay guys are usually clued in to the magic of the asshole, but straight guys can be more squeamish. Yeah, the anus is still pretty taboo in our society, but it's really time that we just get over it. Your asshole feels good, people! Still, ask if he's ok with you sticking a finger in his butt.

8. Find a rhythm

Keeping a steady rhythm - that's what builds up someone's orgasm. If you want to make sure that the guy cums with your efforts, then have some drum beat in your head. One, two, three, four. One, two, three, four. You don't have to go all fast on him, since it would make him feel that you can't wait to get it over with, and all that pressure would only make it harder for him to get in the zone. So start slow and then build it up to go faster at a steady rhythm.

9. Talk to him

Not when you have a dick in your mouth, you silly. Nobody will understand your brlrbrlbr. , But slowly jerking off while telling how good it tastes, how much you can't wait to make him come and all that stuff will bring him that much closer to the edge. Also ask. What he wants you to do next; how he likes it; what to add to your foreplay. Not only will it make it easier for you, but it gives the guy the impression that he's in control. Even when he's not.

TWIFTS

educates

For Him

You guys might think that your one and only thing to do while she is polishing your stick is to lay there and gracefully accept the gift. Wrong! There is so much you can do and you should do. Any sex action is an interaction. So play your part as well.

1. Take a shower

Would you like to smush your face up against something sweaty and slightly stale-smelling? Would you also like to put your tongue on that sweaty, stale, possibly urine-tinged thing? No? Then don't expect someone else to. You don't need to be fresh out of the shower, but just make sure your peen is acceptably clean if a blow job is on the horizon. It's just common courtesy.

2. Be cool if she wants to use a condom

If it's a casual thing and you haven't been tested, the blow job giver is entirely within her rights to only give head when there's a barrier on your bits. Yes, some STIs that can be transmitted orally. And no, no one should take you on your word that you're as clear as a virgin boy. Don't whinge. Either accept it with condom, have safe sex instead, or wait until you've been fully tested and can provide your oral-giver with proof that you're STI-free.

3. Talk

Sometimes, the man is just so grateful to be receiving a blowjob that he's afraid to say anything, even if he has something to say. I'm not saying the man should complain, but it's 100% fine to say things like "Do that again" or "Slower" or "Ow, not so hard." That's not you criticizing the person giving the blowjob. That's you helping them do their job better.

And they want it to be the best experience it can be for two big reasons. #1).

Because, if they're giving you a BJ, it probably means they like you, and #2).

Typically, they want the blowjob to be over as quickly as possible. So, if you tell them "Slower" means that you'll be finishing that much sooner, trust me, they want to hear that feedback.

4. Respond

Do you like what's happening? Then respond to it. Although physically pushing someone to do something is a no go, sharing how good it feels, or suggesting your partner try something vocally is absolutely acceptable. In fact, it's encouraged. Hearing moans of pleasure helps the giver know they're doing alright down there.

5. Get involved

There's something imperious about a guy with his hands behind his head, in full King Shit mode, while getting a blow job. It's got an air of master vs servant about it – not sexy for everyone. Yes, the focus is on you at that moment, but it doesn't mean you can zone out altogether. Find something to do with your hands – involve whoever's blowing you. Stroke her face, play with her hair, boobs, slap her ass if you can reach it. Just do something!

6. Make sure they're OK

It's not easy for everyone to get off from a BJ alone. It can take a while. A really long while. If your train is crawling into the station, make sure they're happy with carrying on. Lockjaw, tired, unenthusiastic sucking and cries of, "For fuck's sake, Dave, just come will you?" aren't exactly going to get you there. It may be that they're being too polite to say how bored they are, so why not focus on pleasuring them for a while – other ways to come do exist. If you're not particularly enjoying the experience, suggest you move onto something else for a while and maybe tell them what you did like. Or show them!

7. Relax

Of course there are certain things you like when it comes to oral sex, but in certain situations, it's okay to let your partner take control in the moment. You never know what they might teach you. So relax and things go as it goes. But "relax" doesn't mean "be absent". Remember what we talked about in point 5.

8. Return the favor

If you're someone who expects blow jobs but never offers oral in return, you are selfish and generally a bit sh*t. If you're not comfortable with giving oral or they're not, or they enjoy giving more than receiving, fine. But you at least need to offer, and you should never, ever feel like you're entitled to all the oral you want.

What you SHOULD NOT do

For Her

Yes, I said it's almost impossible to fuck up a blowjob. But there are some moments than can take a couple points off of your score. And while it will still be appreciated, mostly, why not try to reach perfection?

1. Don't do it if you don't want it

There is a stereotype that every man wants a blowjob at every given point of time. As long as it might be true that they wouldn't deny a random blowjob, it doesn't mean you should be ready to get on your knees every time you feel like you have to lick his dick. There's nothing more unappealing than a workmanlike blowjob from someone who sees it as a contractual obligation. Not sexy at all, ladies.

2. Don't think

Clear your mind. Let not one single thought be present more than a couple of seconds. It should be like meditation. While sucking a dick.

Don't think. When you think you are not present, and when you are not present – you are not in the moment – enjoying it – but rather worried about something. “Why didn't he come yet?” “Am I doing it right?” Turn off any logical thinking during a blow job and you'll instantly see positive effects.

3. Don't forget about safety

Unless it's your beloved husband of ten years and you are absolutely positively sure he's clean. Blowjob can give you STIs. And to spend an evening pleasing a guy only to receive a ton of medical bills afterwards doesn't sound worth risking.

Which is why wearing condoms during oral is a good idea, especially for new, monogamous partners. There are plenty of flavored varieties if the taste of latex isn't really your thing.

4. Don't worry about how you look

Have you ever seen anyone eat a really big popsicle? Like, put their whole dang mouth around it (which, ouch, brain freeze)? It's not a pretty sight! Very few people in this world look their absolute best with their mouth stretched to its full capacity. Don't put more pressure on this already precarious situation by thinking you have to look like a beautiful goddess while hoisting a penis into your mouth. What matters most to everyone involved is how this thing feels.

5. Don't think deep throat is the ultimate technique

Being able to shove a foot-long hot dog into your mouth at a baseball game might get you on the Jumbotron for a few seconds, but if that's the sum total of your oral technique, you need to expand your repertoire. It can get pretty boring after a couple of minutes and, to be honest, he will just start worrying about your gag reflex kicking in and your jaws snapping shut.

6. Don't get repetitive

There's nothing worse than being with someone who does the same things for the same amount of time in the same order. Yes, I talked previously about steady rhythm. But that's different! You need rhythm when you want to make him cum. And you need variation and all the different stuff you can do and you are able to do to make it a pleasant experience. It not a chore

7. Don't rush

Hurrying during a blow job and racing to the finish line won't make that blow job great. On the contrary, it will only give an impression that you just want to get it over with and continue with your no-blowjobs policy life. Never make an impression like that because it kills all your previous effort. Take things slow. Focus on the journey. Enjoy every second of it and forget about the destination. There IS NO DESTINATION. You don't want to get anywhere. There is a practical time and place to speed up a blow job and it's not now.

8. Don't worry about whether to swallow or spit

Also, you just don't have to swallow at all. The person whose dick you're sucking is not going to scream and holler at you if you demurely dispose of his cum into a napkin or cup or something. They might get a little upset if you spit it directly onto their face, but that's really something the two of you should discuss.

9. Don't think you're a slut if you like blowjob

And also don't think you're a prude for not liking it. This one sex act is way overblown (LOL, sorry, I'm sorry), but really, it's just one thing on an endless menu of sex things you can do to a person. No one decent will cut things off with you if you don't like giving BJ's, and I swear, if anyone ever slut-shames you for liking BJ's, direct them to me immediately because there's a conversation we need to have. You like what you like and hate what you hate, and it's all fine and good.

For Him

Man, you probably already know half of the things I'm gonna mention. Cos many are guilty of that stuff. So just in case you want to make it a mutually pleasant experience, just avoid a couple of things and you're good.

1. Don't push her head down.

You've definitely heard this before, and you're about to hear it again: the first rule of getting a blowjob is to never, ever, ever push her head down. It's basically the most heinous thing you could do while getting a blowjob, considering you're literally forcing her to take your dick further into her mouth. Not cool. Unless you have some roleplay and it's a part of the game. Otherwise, if you feel the need to reach down and push on her head, it's best to retract your hands and instead push on your own head, or something. Or you'll stay there alone and with blue balls.

2. Don't stare at her

A little watching is fine, and it's not wise to stare out of the window throughout. But if you refuse to break eye contact with the top of her head while she's going down on you, it might get awkward when she looks up. Let's face it – you basically have no control over your facial expressions when you're getting your soul sucked out through your penis. Making some kind of eye contact while your soul is in the process of ascending to orgasmic heaven might make her laugh, or it might creep her out, so maybe it's a good idea to close your eyes or look around, or something.

3. Don't thrust inside her mouth

My dudes, please attempt to keep your hips still when you're receiving a blowjob. I know, I know, it feels so good and you naturally want to gyrate your pelvis into her face. Like Shakira says, hips don't lie, but please contain yourself. She's giving you a blowjob; you're not having sex with her mouth. Again, if it's not a part of your roleplay. Kinky stuff can be harsh.

4. Don't fart

No??? Just no??? I can't believe I even have to say this. If you're feeling a little bloated and gassy, you hold those farts in out of gentility. It's an unspoken rule of humanity. You simply cannot fart that close to someone's face – especially someone whose face is only a few inches away from your buttock. Have some decency.

5. Don't come without warning

You know how people say, "I don't like surprises" but they secretly do, and so you throw them a surprise birthday party and they pretend to be annoyed, but are actually thrilled? Yeah, it's not like that when it comes to blow jobs. The person sucking gets to decide where you finish, not you. You can make requests, of course, but whether it's a tap on the shoulder, a quick tinkle on a bell you keep beside the bed or a rousing crescendo of "Holy shiiiiiiiiit", they want to know when you're heading for the final countdown.

6. Don't expect her to swallow

Do not assume that they're cool with you coming in their mouth just because their mouth is on your penis. They might not be into it. And if your partner doesn't want to swallow, it doesn't mean they dislike you. Spitting or swallowing has nothing to do with your personal relationship. It's just not everyone's cup of tea, and nobody should be forced to swallow if they don't want to.

7. Don't leave right after

If you have just been given a head, don't go to sleep minutes after she stepped side from your dick. Or don't go playing computer games. Or don't go anywhere. Just stay there with her for some time and appreciate the moment. Jeess, is it so hard to say a couple of nice words afterwards? Or cuddle? Or you can, you know, go down on her.

8. Don't demand

She is not obliged to suck your dick. Not at any given moment of time. Even if you have blue balls. Even if she's on your period. Even if you feel a blowjob could save your life right now. Don't demand. Ask. And if she says yes, have a nice time, you lucky bastard! If no, then you have your trustful Right and Left to help you out. Or just have sex as an alternative.

TWIFT recommends: Skill Moves

To do an amazing blowjob, that will be incredibly enjoyable for both, you and your partner, you need to come up with a base technique (kinda blowjob 101), using which you will feel comfortable doing it, your breath will not go astray, even when the penis is completely in your mouth. Here is the technique that we recommend (to make it easier to describe, let's imagine that the partner is sitting, and the girl in front of him is on her knees): after a little teasing and caressing the head, the girl grabs the cock with her lips, dropping down it is necessary to tilt her chin closer to her chest, and rising up the other way around. It looks like some kind of vertical wave. Further, this basic movement can be supplemented with wave-like tongue movements...

or circular ...

Another tip is: while grabbing the head with her mouth, the girl drops down turning her head, for example, from left to right, like a corkscrew while the tip of the tongue should be firm.

So, there you go. A bunch of tips and tricks to make your blowjob experience as enjoyable as it can be. In a nutshell, be nice, be vocal, and respect your partner.

